

THE PRISON AND THE ACADEMY VIII: “PRISON EDUCATION AND ENGAGED SCHOLARSHIP”

Monday, April 15th,
4:30 - 7pm
Lewis Library Room 120

Prison education, including but not limited to combined courses, represents a rich opportunity for scholars inside and outside carceral institutions to learn with and educate each other. This form of “Engaged Scholarship” connects teaching and research “to our most pressing social, civic, and ethical problems” (Boyer, 1996).

Our panel of engaged scholars will offer short presentations about a range of teaching, research, and policy initiatives. Reception to follow.

Speakers

BEN BERGER, Laurance S. Rockefeller Visiting Professor for Distinguished Teaching, Princeton University

KEITH REEVES and JACK POKORNY

Professor of Political Science, Swarthmore College; and Swarthmore Class of 2019

LUCY LANG and JARRELL E. DANIELS

Executive Director, Institute for Innovation in Prosecution at John Jay College (CUNY); Research Assistant, The Center for Justice, Columbia University

THOMAS COTTON and CARRIE HUTNICK

Program Fellow and Teaching Assistant Swarthmore College and member of the Graterford Think Tank; Associate Director for Community Based Learning at the Lindy Center for Civic Engagement, Drexel University

CATRINA PALMER, Doctoral Candidate in Organizational Behavior, Rutgers University

AMY SHLOSBERG, Associate Professor of Criminology, Farleigh Dickinson University

NINA JOHNSON, Assistant Professor of Sociology, Swarthmore College

Sponsored by the University Center for Human Values, the Petey Greene Program, the Lichtenstein Institute for Self-Determination, the Pace Center for Civic Engagement, the McGraw Center for Teaching and Learning, the Program for Community-Engaged Scholarship, and the Prison Teaching Initiative.

Questions? Email organizers

Ben Berger (bfberger@princeton.edu) and Jill Stockwell (jfstockw@princeton.edu)